An old couple had worked very hard and saved every paisa they possibly could to go on a pilgrimage. Finally they had enough money to set out. On the way they passed through a small village and decided to spend the night in one of the inns there. Kamlesh, the owner told the couple to leave their belongings with him and freshen up for dinner. They had been warned that there would be many thieves on the way and were quite careful with their money pouch. So they refused and took turns to sit holding the bag containing their money while they had dinner.

To keep the pouch safe they decided to use it as a pillow. To their horror the next morning, they discovered it was gone ! Kamlesh and his wife had entered the room and removed the bag while they were asleep. The two were in despair. They would not be able to complete their pilgrimage and went to Kamlesh 'Where is our money?' they demanded. But Kamlesh coolly replied, 'I don't know anything about your bag. This is and honest person's lodge. Please leave'.

After arguing for awhile, the elderly couple walked out clutching their belongings. As they walked through the village, they told people their story. To see the old couple get justice, the villagers told them to go to Krishnakant, the king's counselor who was famous for his sense of fairness. Krishnakant heared their story and said, 'I have a drum in my house. If you tell the truth in front of the drum, it starts beating by itself. come to my house tomorrow morning and carry the drum to the court. On your way, tell the drum your story. I will send word to Kamleshy to carry the drum back in the afternoon. I will be ready with the verdict in the evening'. The next morning, the old couple started walking with the magic drum to the court. It was very heavy. The court was at a distance and the two were soon tired. So they stopped to rest under a big banyan tree.

The old man said, 'We will never get justice in a strange kingdom. I was so careful with the money, yet we lost it. May be the lord does not wish us to visit him'. As he uttered these words, the sound of drumbeats was heard. The old couple was very happy. 'We may have no witness, but God knows we are speaking the truth'. Then they stood up and, after drinking some water from a nearby stream, they picked up the drum which to their surprise, had Kamlesh replied angrily, 'Don't blame me. Who unlocked the door and showed me where the pouch was kept? Do you really believe this is a magical drum? I am sure no one knows the truth, Now Krishnakant himself jumped out of the drum. I am the witness. I have heard every word you said, and also what the old couple said.
